Dealing with complaints

It is recognised that many individuals may be unwilling to make a complaint regarding equal opportunities, for a variety of reasons, including:

Fear that others will consider that behaviour trivial

Fear of retaliation and or public humiliation

Fear that the complaint will not be taken seriously

Such concerns may make an individuals choose to leave the organisation, or change their job"

Manders Building Contractors Limited regards this as unacceptable. It is important that employees should feel able to raise concerns without fear and in the knowledge that their complaint will be taken seriously.

All complaints will receive prompt attention and will be properly investigated. We will seek to resolve them as quickly as possible.

Sometimes it may be possible for an employee affected by the behaviour of another simply to ask the harasser to stop, or make it clear that the behaviour is unwelcome. If this is appropriate then the employee should do this. However, such an approach may not be appropriate and employees should feel able to raise matters at any time with their line manager or with the Managing Director Mr Kurt Manders under the business's existing Grievance Procedure
